ATTENTION

ALL INDIVIDUALS INVOLVED WITH ELECTRICAL SERVICES AND FEEDERS TO MANUFACTURED HOMES.

The requirements for electrical power supplies to manufactured homes have changed. 50 AMP power cords are no longer the norm for these connections. Most installations should now be hardwired, 100 AMPS or as required per load calculation or installation manual.

The electrical service for new homes must be done to the manufacturer of the home's installation manual (most, if not all, will require hardwiring but check to be sure).

The electrical service for pre-owned but relocated homes should probably be the same as for new homes (100 AMP hardwired typically). If you wish to use a 50 AMP cord, a load calculation must be ran using the specification in Article 550 of the NEC (be sure not to omit provision for an electric clothes dryer, if applicable, as this generally puts the calculation at more than 50 AMPS per leg). A copy of this calculation should accompany the submitted permit when only 50 AMPS are supplied.
